The MY LIFE Single Game at a glance

The game "My Life in Europe", which for short we will call "My Life", was created to stimulate the writing of episodes of one's life and to build one's own autobiography in a guided way, to be shared with other people.

From sharing new relationships are born, and through relationships we take care of each other.

By playing "My Life" these relationships can cross national borders and build a greater sense of belonging: a sense of belonging to the European community.

That's how.

The game allows you to write your own autobiography by writing short fragments of text, each associated with a "stimulus card".

Each card has an image, a title, sometimes a sound, and is accompanied by a writing stimulus. The cards have an order. The first cards of each deck concern the first years of life and follow the course of time until adulthood. Each card belongs to one of these categories, determined by the autobiographical methodology. These categories are: time; space; bodies, figures or faces; actions or facts; emotions; sensory perceptions; objects.

The indications given by the cards are purposely generic just to stimulate your imagination and creativity. Even the writing proposals are some of the various possibilities that you too can find. Autobiographical writing, in fact, can take the form, appearance and style that each narrator decides to give it: expose facts chronologically, use metaphors, choose a poetic or other creative form. Regardless of the form it takes, the narration of one's life is a way to better understand the past, the present and lays the foundations for the future, putting order in the existential story. You can choose what to write based on the solicitation of a card and you can also add new memories later. If a card doesn't inspire you, you can safely skip it. With the online version of the game, all the writings that arise from your memories can be archived and used to build your autobiography.

The instructions of the online game to use as a player or single player are very simple.
